Not illustrated. 1887 Excerpt: ...(see Part First, V. 4o). 40. The article is used in French, much more generally than in English, before a noun taken inclusively, or expressing the whole kind or class. See Part First, IV. 5. Further examples are: le chien est lennemi du chat, et le chat de la souris the dog is the cats foe, and the cat the mouses (here the usage is the same in both languages: but), le vinaigre est acide vinegar is sour, le bois leger a moins de valeur light wood is worth less, j'aime la salade I like salad, nous apprenons lhistoire we learn history. The article thus used we have called the inclusive article (see Part First, IV. 5a). a. By a like usage, the article generally stands before an abstract noun: thus, la foi, la charite, et l'esperance faith, love, and hope, la modestie est une belle vertu modesty is a beautiful virtue, le temps dn peril est aussi celui du courage the time of danger is also that of courage. So also with an adjective used as an abstract noun: thus, le culte dn beau the worship of the beautiful, elle aime le vert she likes green. b. But the article is often omitted in proverbial and old-style expressions, as well as in various phrases. ILLUSTRATIVE SENTENCES.--V. Partitive and Inclusive Article. (39.) 1 On a des bras, pas de travail; on a du c?ur, pas d'ouvrage. (V. Hugo.) Il y avait sur cette table, et a profusion, brosses, eponges, savons, vinaigres, pommades, etc., mais pas une goutte deau. (Lab.) Je nai vraiment que des obligations au baron Taylor. (Bum.) Madame, je nai point des sentiments si bas. (Rac.) Vous savez bien que nous ne sommes pas des hypocrites. (G. Sand.) Voulez-vous des petits pains? restez; j'en ai d'excellents. (Dum.) Il s'agit d'avoir du bon sens, mais de ...
